

Do This 3-Step Sequence To Turn Any Slice Into A Draw

Performance Golf

OPEN >

Ohio runaway puts blame on parents' lawyer

NEWS

Feb 9, 2011

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) -- An Ohio woman who ran away to Florida as a teenager after converting from Islam to Christianity is criticizing her parents' attorney, saying his actions harmed her ability to reunite with her family.

Rifqa Bary turned 18 last year without reconciling with her Muslim parents, who she says threatened her after they discovered she had become a Christian.

Advertisement

Spider Infestation? This Simple Solution Works Wonders

BugMD

OPEN >

Bary says her parents' Columbus attorney, Omar Tarazi, conducted himself unprofessionally by recommending her parents try to have her declared an unruly child.

Bary makes her comments in an affidavit filed Tuesday with the Florida Supreme Court as part of a complaint filed by Tarazi against Bary's former lawyer.

Tarazi says he is preparing a response to Bary's allegations.

Authorities have said they found no credible threats to the girl following her conversion.

In Other News

Elsa’s chain closes one of its Dayton-area restaurants

Man pleads guilty to selling counterfeit items at Mall at Fairfield Commons

Joby reports $82M loss as Ohio, California manufacturing footprints grow

Best of Dayton 2025: Vote for your favorites here

Easy day trips for seniors in Southwest Ohio

Sign Up for Newsletters

News

- Local
- Obituaries
- Weather
- Ohio Lottery
- NIE Teacher Access
- Newsletters
- Newspaper Archives

Customer Service

- Contact the Dayton Daily News
- Our Products
- Feedback
- FAQs
- Digital Help Center
- Work Here

Marketplace

- Classifieds
- Jobs
- Cars for Sale
- HomesPlus
- Advertise
- Legal Notices

Follow Us